Mont-Loius, France I made a delightful sidetrip to Mont-Louis, France, a charming fortified village nestled in the Pyrenees. Known for being the highest walled town in France, Mont-Louis offers stunning mountain views, peaceful cobblestone streets, and a rich military history dating back to the reign of Louis XIV. It was a quiet escape with a timeless atmosphere.

Grindelwald Grindelwald, Interlaken, and Lauterbrunnen were pure magic like scenes lifted from a collector's stamp album. The landscapes were surreal: dramatic cliffs, glacial valleys, and postcardperfect chalets nestled beneath the Alps. It's the kind of beauty that makes you pause and just breathe it all in.

Monaco I climbed to one of Monaco's best viewpoints, and the panorama was absolutely overwhelming. From up there, I could see the glittering harbor, luxury yachts, and grand casinos, an entire playground for the rich and famous laid out beneath me. It felt surreal to witness such opulence from above, like peeking into a world reserved for the elite.

Nice, France I spent a relaxing day in Nice, France, soaking up the sun and enjoying the Mediterranean breeze along its stunning coastline. The pebbled beaches, turquoise waters, and vibrant promenade made it the perfect spot to unwind and take in the charm of Luxembourg City One of the coolest things about Luxembourg? All public transport is free; yes, buses, trains, and trams! I hopped on a train to Schengen, the symbolic birthplace of the Schengen visa. Standing at the very spot where the agreement was signed felt surreal, knowing how it has opened borders for millions, including me.
